How To Make Night and Weekend Call a Success

About this DVD Series

This DVD series is structured to provide important and clinically relevant information for those physicians and other medical personnel who provide or use radiology services in emergency suites, intensive care units, trauma centers, and other emergency and critical care locations. Imaging protocols, techniques and diagnostic pitfalls are emphasized so that studies can be performed and interpreted in an optimal and time efficient manner so that patients may benefit fully from these procedures. The carefully selected internationally recognized faculty will stress the importance of minimizing radiation dose to protect the patients' welfare. The need for careful and complete communication between the radiologist and the clinicians will be emphasized.

Target Audience

This DVD CME series is primarily intended and designed to educate those physicians and other medical personnel who use, supervise and/or interpret radiology studies and procedures in emergency suites, trauma centers, and intensive care units. Thus, this should be particularly helpful for radiologists, intensivists, trauma surgeons, allied health personnel and emergency medicine physicians. It should also be beneficial for those who order imaging studies and wish to better understand current applications of imaging methods and indications.

Educational Objectives

At the completion of this DVD CME series, subscribers should be able to:

- Discuss approaches to imaging of the most frequent and serious emergency and critical care problems that occur in their practice
- Understand how best to respond to the wide variety of imaging and interventional situations that occur most often during the evening and weekends
- Implement into their practices protocols for assessing the trauma patient in a time efficient manner

No special educational preparation is required for this CME activity.
